To each and every EXPERT—to those parents, grandparents, teachers, librarians, caregivers, child development specialists, pediatricians, nurses, child psychologists and psychoanalysts, health educators, and clergy who read over and looked over our work, talked to us, taught us, and corrected us over and over again as we created this book for young children. We could not have created this book without you. THANK YOU!—R. H. H.

For the love of Becky, as always

Yippee, Nellie!
Everybody is going to the beach!

Yes, Gus. Every body—
your body, my body—every body is going to the beach!

Everybody everywhere
has a body!

Even babies have bodies—little bodies. When a new baby is born, that baby is either a girl baby or a boy baby.

When baby boys and baby girls grow bigger, they become kids.

Girls and boys are different—right, Nellie?

Or—are we mostly the same?
